Attractive routes and boulder problems - the long-term recipe for success of every climbing and bouldering gym (d/e)

Create attractive routes and boulder problems in climbing gyms requires experience, creativity and craftsmanship. The panel discussion will highlight the central field of work of climbing and bouldering gyms: From the organisation of route setting to the necessary equipment to route setting as a service, craft and/or art. Last but not least, the question will be discussed how to get different and attractive movement patterns on the wall.

Speakers: Nick Mammel, CEO Urban Apes Climbing Gyms
Peter Zeidelhack, operation manager DAV Climbing Centre Munich South and member of the DAV training team route setting
Christoph Gabrysch, operation manager Climbing Centre Kempten and member of the DAV training team route setting

Program

Saturday, 25.11.2023

9.00 am

Start of fair

11.30 – 12.30 am

Foyer East

Inclusive route setting - climbing for everyone (d/e)

The limitations for people with and without disabilities can be very different, so the requirements for route setting are also very different. The speakers provide clear examples from practice and discuss how they address the special needs of different target groups. The aim is to create conditions for everyone to enjoy physical activity.

Speaker: Dr. Claudia Kern, Head of the Neurology Department of the Board of Trustees for Prevention and Rehabilitation at the TUM and member of the DAV training team inclusion
Julius Kerscher, member of the DAV training team route setting

2.30 – 3.30 pm

Foyer East

Route setting on social media - curse or blessing? What´s the point?

Three professionals present their work with social media. In their lectures on their social media channels, they show what makes their channel so successful. How do you manage to reach a lot of followers on Instagram? How do you both do good for route setting and build a booming social media channel? What needs to be considered and what content should be published not only for safety reasons? These and other questions will then be discussed.

Speaker: Marie-Luise Kühne, Marketing and route setting Magic Mountain
Peter Zeidelhack, operation manager DAV Climbing Centre Munich South and member of the DAV training team route setting
